

Most of the apparent social gradient in county DR estimates is a measurement artifact

Social vulnerability coefficient on the vision-threatening share, before and after holding demographic composition fixed

VEHSS builds county estimates by applying national race- and age-specific rates to each county's population mix, so county demographics move the estimate mechanically. Estimating within race x age strata removes that pathway by design.