

The social gradient replicates in every demographic stratum

Social vulnerability coefficient estimated separately within each race-by-age group

Dashed line is the pooled within-stratum estimate (0.035). The same association appears in White, Black and Hispanic populations and in both age bands, which argues against its being an artifact of any one population. Each stratum contributes exactly one observation per county, so no clustering correction applies to these intervals.